Florida here we come!

During a week of workshops and meetings the collaboration between H2CU and FIU (Florida International University) has strengthened. During this first official occasion (February 2013), Italian delegates and FIU representatives discussed the ongoing activities for starting joint programs for the academic and scientific exchange of students, researchers and faculties from Italy and the US coming respectively from the 21 Italian universities belonging to the H2CU and from FIU, specifically from CEC (College of Engineering and Computing) and CAS (College of Arts and Sciences) programs. In early 2012 an agreement was signed by the FIU Provost Dr. Douglas Wartzok and Rector prof. Luigi Frati of Sapienza University of Rome and as a result of the success of the February 13-19 events, Consul General of Italy in Miami, Dr. Adolfo Barattolo, officially endorsed the agreement between H2CU and FIU.

News

Best students will receive scholarships to study English Dr. Luis Sanchez, the Director of the English Language Institute of the FIU- Florida International University, offered two 10-months-scholarships to the H2CU Center. These funds will cover the tuition fees and the students will be responsible for their books, insurance, registration payment, and technology fee.

H2CU mailing list invitation:

Brooklyn Atlantis is a citizen science project launched in November 2012 through the collaboration of NYU-Poly and H2CU students. The aim is to involve citizens in environmental monitoring by analyzing data and tagging images taken by our marine robot within the Gowanus Canal in Brooklyn, NY. Currently featuring a new website, we are able to provide exciting data at least three times a week, so visit <http://www.brooklynatlantis.poly.edu> participate, and spread the word to your friends. This is a good opportunity for you to see what happens in the canals of NYC and to help other Italian students in their research!

STAY TUNED! In the coming months, other events organized by H2CU will be held in the United States, in Boston and New York. Under the umbrella of "2013, the Year of the Italian Culture in the US" those events will celebrate the decade of activities developed by H2CU for students and faculties exchange and dual degrees.
